Indhold	In a variety of arenas, the Scandinavian welfare states have been under transformation during the last decades - for instance developing new forms of welfare governance, discussing financial coverage of welfare services, participatory and citizen led innovation and political engagement or new forms of market economy. This development situates the Nordic welfare in a pinpoint of changes that both mirrors international trends but also differs. In this PhD course leading international and Nordic scholars will present and discuss their research – in collaboration with participating PhD students. We provide theoretical overviews as well as empirical findings covering how – and if - NPM and NPG and beyond provide a fertile ground in the Scandinavian welfare states for the emergence of social enterprise and social innovation. Phenomena like reciprocity, participation and relational welfare signal a new welfare profile and we discuss whether social enterprise and co-production are furthering these developments. In a Nordic context, we point to how social movements and welfare dynamics as narratives form the roots and future of collaborative innovation and social entrepreneurship and how this seems to be both a potential but also a barrier. MONDAY, 9th October, 2017 9.30-10.00: Arrival and registration: coffee/tea 10.00-10.30: Presentation and introduction / Prof. Lars Hulgård, Roskilde University 10.30-12.30: Universalism, New Public Management, New Public Governance and Beyond in Scandinavian Welfare States / Prof. Victor Pestoff and Prof. Lars Hulgård 12.30-13.30: Lunch (canteen) 13.30-15.00: Student presentations in groups and feedback from students and faculty discussants / Prof. Victor Pestoff, Prof. Linda Lundgaard Andersen and Prof. Lars Hulgård, Roskilde University 15.00-15.30: Coffee/tea 15.30-17.00: Micro-Processes of Collaborative Innovation in Nordic Welfare Settings: Narratives of Social Movements and Welfare Dynamics / Prof. Linda Lundgaard Andersen, Roskilde University
