Registration	Please register via STADS-self-service within the annonced registration period, for more information see: https://intra.ruc.dk/en/students/student-hub/student-hub/ruc-uddannelsesjura-og-studieadministration/registration-periods/
Prerequisite for participation	Course participants are encouraged to keep an open and pluralist mind for the engagement with political economy. Prior knowledge is not required.
Learning outcomes/ Assessment criteria	The course objective is to - introduce students to carefully selected primary literature from classical, critical and heterodox strands of economic thought - provide students with a thorough understanding of core concepts and debates in critical political economy - enable students to apply core theoretical and methodological aspects of heterodox perspectives to a given case-based event or process - encourage students to critically reflect on contemporary dynamics and developments in the global economy - address key methodological challenges linking theory and empirical research for critical analyses.
Overall content	Modern mainstream economic theory is based on highly political assumptions, which are rarely challenged: dogmas of deregulation, mathematical models and austerity are treated as objective scientific facts, rather than ideological tools with a social and political history of their own. This course aims to repoliticize the study of economics and challenge the hegemony of neoclassical economic theory. This will be accomplished through a historical examination of the development of economic thought, and critical engagement with original economic texts. As such, the course objective is to understand the varied historical effect of these theories on both the object of study and the discipline itself. The first part of the course “Economic Thought from Oikos to Economics” traces the history of economic ideas with an emphasis on critical and heterodox approaches. The individual sessions will introduce students to carefully selected primary literature from classical, critical and heterodox strands of economic thought. The objective is to understand the varied historical effect of these theories on both the object of study and the discipline itself. This will provide the foundation for further elaboration on contemporary issues such as debt, unemployment, inequality, and growth. The second part of the course “Contemporary Challenges, Critiques and Alternatives” addresses present and pressing issues, through the lens of critical and heterodox political economy. This theoretical and applied pluralism will provide insights on issues such as e.g. the development crisis, financialisation, austerity politics and climate change, that are not conceptually possible if sticking to mainstream approaches. Through the employment of recent critiques, latter section of the course offers potential pathways towards different conceptualisations and alternatives to ‘the economy’ as we know it.
Expected work effort (ECTS-declaration)	For Master-Level Participants Class teaching: 30 hours Other (for example student presentations, exercises, peer-review): 50 hours Preparation: 135 hours Examination: 55 hours Hours in total: 270 hours

Form of examination

For Master-level Participants.

The examination is in two parts:

1. Assignment written during the course.

The first part of the examination is an answer to a question handed out at the start of the course. The assignment is submitted during the final course session. The written assignment may not exceed 12,000 characters, including spaces (corresponding to five standard pages).

2. 48-hour written assignment.

The student is given 48 hours to write the second part of the examination. The assignment is set after the final course session. The assignment may not exceed 12,000 characters, including spaces (corresponding to five standard pages). The size of the assignments is based on 2,400 characters (incl. spaces) per page, excluding the front page, table of contents, bibliography and any appendices. Assignments will be refused examination if they exceed the maximum size, and one examination attempt will be deemed to have been used up.

A single overall grade is awarded. The two assignments have equal weight in the assessment.

Form of re-examination

Re-examination: Students who do not submit the first written assignment at the final course session must do so within two weeks of the end of the course. Re-examination of the 48-hour written assignment will take place during the re-examination period.
